Frequently Asked Questions about Your Survey Report

What is the history behind the Me and My World survey?

In the mid-1990s, Search Institute began conceptualizing Developmental Assets for children below 6th grade, based on its asset framework for adolescents (Leffert, Benson, & Roehlkepartain, 1997). From 2000 through 2003, Search Institute received generous support from the Donald W. Reynolds Foundation to more deeply examine the role of Developmental Assets in the first decade of life. This resulted in a newly created asset framework for children in grades 4-6 as well as a survey to measure these assets, using the adolescent framework and survey, and our prior work on assets for children, as guides. We concluded that while many of the underlying ideas present in the adolescent framework also seemed to be relevant for younger children, some modification was necessary to adequately reflect the unique developmental processes occurring during these middle childhood years.

How is the Me and My World survey different than the Search Institute Profiles of Student Life: Attitudes & Behaviors survey for adolescents?

The adolescent survey has been taken by more than 1.5 million students, and has given a powerful voice to teenagers by allowing them to report on how they view their relationships with adults, their communities, and their own competencies and skills. This information has then been used to help reshape and rebuild communities to better promote positive youth development. The goal for the MMW is to provide a voice for younger students to describe the positive experiences in their lives.

However, the 4th – 6th grade survey differs in several important respects from the adolescent survey. Since it was designed for use by younger children, it has a 4th grade reading level (Flesch Grade Level of 4.4). Moreover, although some 4th – 6th graders do engage in risk behavior patterns, most high-risk behavior is typically much less common than it is during adolescence, and so the MMW includes fewer measures of risk behavior patterns than does the similar survey for adolescents. Finally, the adolescent survey was originally designed more for public communication purposes than as a research instrument, whereas the MMW is intended to serve both communication and research purposes. Thus, more constructs are measured at acceptable levels of statistical reliability in the MMW than is the case in the adolescent survey.

What is the difference between the definitions of risk behaviors and risk behavior patterns for children and adolescence, and why are risk behaviors not reported in the MMW report, like they are in the A & B adolescent report?

Risk behaviors, on either the A&B or the MMW, are unhealthy actions done just once (MMW) or twice (A&B) by the child or adolescent in the specified time period. Risk behavior patterns, on the other hand, exemplify higher levels of these same unhealthy actions, i.e., two or more times in middle childhood or three or more times in adolescence during the relevant time period. We recognize that during middle childhood, just as in adolescence, children and youth sometimes engage in an isolated incidence of behavior that is bad for them. While troubling, this is not necessarily indicative of a more serious pattern of high risk behavior. So we distinguish behaviors and patterns for each developmental level, on their respective surveys. The major difference is that we apply a more stringent criterion at the middle childhood level (i.e., two or more times versus three or more times for adolescents). We reason that adolescents, in their more sophisticated exploration and search for personal identity, on average may be able to engage in an occasional high risk behavior with less deleterious impact, both because experimentation is part of their work in identity development, and because they typically have greater skills for minimizing negative consequences or dealing with them. For younger children, however, we reason that anything more than one instance of such risk behaviors in the last year is cause for concern. Engaging in risk behaviors multiple times over a given period contributes to setting children on an adverse developmental path that has greater long-term consequences than would be the case for adolescents who participate in a similar frequency of risk behaviors.

Why did Search Institute decide to include risk behavior questions on the MMW given that risk behaviors are less prevalent for children at this age?

Market research conducted prior to the development phase of the MMW indicated that a majority of school personnel and administrators preferred to track risk behavior data. Although there are only a few national reports to date on the prevalence of these risk behaviors for 4th and 5th graders, smaller studies do indeed suggest that anywhere from a few to 20 percent may have experimented with tobacco or alcohol, depending on the sample^{3,4}. Moreover, the MMW includes students in 6th grade, a time at which some studies suggest that 40% of the sample may be experimenting with alcohol and other drugs⁵. Since indications of trend changes may be of interest to your school or community (as it is in research), examination of reported risk behaviors among 4th and 5th graders surveyed over multiple years may tell you whether the age of initial experimentation is lowering.
